

Partying After the Golden Globes

 nytimes.com/slideshow/2018/01/08/style/partying-after-the-golden-globes/s/08GG-SCENECITY-slide-9LXZ.html

January 7, 2018

After the Golden Globes, the party circuit began. For the first time, the Hollywood Foreign Press Association, which bestows the Globes, held a party where winners including Elisabeth Moss could get their statues engraved.

Credit Elisabeth Lippman for The New York Times

Partying After the Golden Globes

nytimes.com/slideshow/2018/01/08/style/partying-after-the-golden-globes/s/08GG-SCENECITY-slide-MYFO.html

January 7, 2018

Sterling K. Brown with his statue.

Elizabeth Lippman for The New York Times

Partying After the Golden Globes

 nytimes.com/slideshow/2018/01/08/style/partying-after-the-golden-globes/s/08GG-SCENECITY-slide-21GX.html

January 7, 2018

Sam Rockwell waited for his statue to be engraved.

Elizabeth Lippman for The New York Times

Partying After the Golden Globes

nytimes.com/slideshow/2018/01/08/style/partying-after-the-golden-globes/s/08GG-SCENECITY-slide-IMOK.html

January 7, 2018

“The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel” winners, from left: the actress Rachel Brosnahan, and the creators Amy Sherman-Palladino and Daniel Palladino.